There was a regular meeting of the City Council Monday evening June 24, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding. The meeting was snappy, and considerable business was transacted.

This was the date set for hearing protests on the weed cleaning. The city clerk reported that there were no protests, and a resolution was passed which will result in the removal of noxious and dangerous weeds.

The plans having been prepared for alterations of the front of the City Hall, the clerk was instructed to advertise for bids.

The finance committee reported the funds in good shape to proceed with other work and improvements which the board had in mind, and the clerk was instructed to advertise for bids for a new fire house and Veteran Firemen's meeting hall, to be built where the old fire house of Company No. 1 now stands, on Santa Barbara avenue, near Hillcrest Drive; also for a new storage pump house to take the place of the one on Templeton avenue, near Mission.

The street committee and the city engineer were instructed to make a study of the bad condition at the junction of Frankfort street and Templeton avenue and bring in a report at the next meeting of the board.

A communication was received from the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, asking permission to cut the pavement on Hillcrest Drive for the installation of underground wiring. The permit was granted and the city engineer instructed to see that the work was properly done.

The Veterans' Welfare Board requested exemption on certain pieces of property to which they claim title. The city clerk was instructed to request a certificate of title before granting exemption.

A letter was received from a resident in the Crocker Tract, complaining of bad parking practices by the neighbors. The matter was referred to Councilman Dalton and Chief Doyle.

The light committee reported a study being made of the requests and necessity for additional lighting.

The police committee reported Stop and Go signals installed at Mission and Hillcrest Drive, and that they were evidently working very satisfactorily.

The committee also reported that Officer Otto Schramm had secured a position as traffic officer with the state and expressed the regrets of the Council in losing such an efficient and splendid officer. Edward Heim takes Mr. Schramm's position on the police force.

The street committee reported a study being made of the ornamental arches along Alexander avenue, and promised a full report of what best to do with them at the next meeting.

STORY FROM THE START

Athol Meldrum, young Scotsman who tells the story leaves his mother and brother, Garry, to seek his fortune. At San Francisco, practically penniless, he takes a laborer's job, and meets a fellow adventurer whom he dubs, the Prodigal. The Prodigal is anxious to join the rush of gold seekers into Alaska, and Meldrum agrees to go with him after he (the Prodigal) comes back from a visit to his wealthy father in the East. Athol, in great need, is befriended by Jim Hubbard ("Salvation Jim"). When the Prodigal returns, the three men join the stampede into the Frozen North. On the boat is a young girl obviously out of place. She is traveling with her grandfather and a hard-looking couple named Winklestein who figure as her uncle and aunt. Athol has an opportunity to befriend her, and she tells him a sad story of her life. She is journeying into Alaska to take care of her grandfather, who is obsessed with the idea of getting rich in Klondike. Her name, she tells him, is Berna. Landing at Skagway, Athol's party at once takes the trail. In a snowslide on the Chilcoot trail, which Berna and her companions had taken, hundreds of lives are lost. Fearful for Berna's safety, Athol hastens to the scene. He finds the old man dead and learns that Berna is prostrated. Madam Winklestein refuses to let him see the girl, but he leaves a letter for her.

Our party was well qualified to pass the test of the trail. The Prodigal was full of irrepressible enthusiasm, and always loaded to the muzzle with ideas. Salvation Jim was a mine of foresight and resource, while the Jam-wagon proved himself an insatiable glutton for work. Altogether we fared better than the average party.

We were camped on the narrow neck of water between Lindeman and Bennett, and as hay was two hundred and fifty dollars a ton, the first thing we did was to butcher the ox. The next was to see about building a boat. We thought of whipsawing our own boards, but the timber near us was poor or thinned out, so that in the end we bought lumber, paying for it twenty cents a foot. We were all very unexpert carpenters; however, by watching others, we managed to make a decent looking boat.

The ice was going fast. Strangers were still coming in over the trail with awful tales of its horrors. Bennett was all excitement and seething life. Thousands of ungainly boats, rafts and scows were waiting to be launched. Already craft were beginning to come through from Lindeman, rushing down the fierce torrent between the two lakes.

The ice was loose and broken. We were all ready to start in a few days. The mighty camp was in a ferment of excitement. Every one seemed elated beyond words. On, once more, to Eldorado! A great exultation welled up in me, the voice of youth and ambition, the lust to conquer. I would succeed, I would wrest from the vast, lonely, mysterious North some of its treasure. I would be a conqueror.

Silent and abstracted, I looked into the brooding disk of sheeny sky, my eyes dream-troubled.

Then I felt a ghostly hand touch my arm, and with a great start of surprise, I turned.

"Berna!"

The girl was wearing a thin black shawl around her shoulders, but in the icy wind blowing from the lake she trembled like a wand. Her face was pale, waxen, almost spiritual in its expression, and she looked at me with just the most pitiably sweet smile in the world.

"I'm sorry I startled you; but I wanted to thank you for your letter and for your sympathy. You see, I'm all alone now." The voice faltered, but went on bravely. "I've got no one that cares about me any more, and I've been sick, so sick I wonder I lived. I knew you'd forgotten me, and I don't blame you. But I've never forgotten you, and I wanted to see you just once more."

She was speaking quite calmly and unemotionally.

"Berna!" I cried; "don't say that. Your reproach hurts me so. Indeed I did try to find you, but it's such a vast camp. There are so many thousands of people here. Time and again I inquired, but no one seemed to know. No, Berna, I didn't forget. Many's and many's a night I've lain awake thinking of you, wondering, longing to see you again. What a little white wisp you are! You look as if a breeze would blow you away. You shouldn't be out this night, girl. Put my coat around you, come now."

I wrapped her in it and saw with gladness her shivering cease. In the opal light of the luminous sky her great gray eyes were lustrous.

"Berna," I said again, "why did you come in here, why? You should have gone back."

"Gone back," she repeated; "indeed I would have, oh, so gladly. But you don't understand—they wouldn't let me. After they had got all his money—and they did get it, though they swear he had nothing—they made me come on with them. They said I owed them for his burial, and for the care and attention they gave me when I was sick. They said I must come on with them and work for them. I protested, I struggled. But what's the use? I can't do anything against them any more. I'm weak, and I'm terribly afraid of her."

She shuddered, then a look of fear came into her eyes. I put my hand on her arm and drew her close to me.

"This is terrible, Berna. What have you been doing all the time?"

"Oh, I've been working, working for them. They've been running a little restaurant and I've waited on table. But we're going down the lake tomorrow, so I thought I would just slip away and say good-by."

"Not good-by," I faltered; "not good-by."

Her tone was measured, her eyes closed almost.

"Yes, I'm afraid I must say it. When we get down there, it's good-by, good-by. The less you have to do with me, the better."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, I mean this. These people are not decent. They're vile. I must go with them; I cannot get away. Go your way and leave me to whatever fate is in store for me."

"Never!" I said harshly. "What do you take me for, Berna?"

"My friend . . . you know, after his death, when I was so sick, I wanted to die. Then I got your letter, and I felt I must see you again for—I thought a lot of you. No man's ever been so kind to me as you have. They've all been—the other sort. I used to think of you a good deal, and I wanted to do some little thing to show you I was really grateful.

"Oh, come, Berna, never mind that."

"Yes, I mean it. I just wanted to tell you the things a poor girl thought of you. But now it's all nearly over. We've neither of us got to think of each other any more . . . and I just wanted to give you this—to remind you sometimes of Berna."

It was a poor little locket and it contained a lock of her silken hair.

"It's worth nothing, I know, but just keep it for me."

"Indeed I will, Berna, keep it always, and wear it for you. But I can't let you go like this. See here, girl, is there nothing I can do? Berna, Berna, look at me, listen to me! Is there? What can I do? Tell me, tell me, my girl."

She seemed to sway to me gently. Indeed I did not intend it, but somehow she was in my arms. She felt so slight and frail a thing, I feared to hurt her.

Then I felt her bosom heaving, and I knew she was crying. For a little I let her cry, but presently I lifted up the white face that lay on my shoulder. It was wet with tears. Again and again I kissed her. She lay passively in my arms. Never did she try to escape nor hide her face, but seemed to give herself up to me. Her tears were salt upon my lips, yet her own lips were cold, and she did not answer to my kisses.

At last she spoke. Her voice was like a little sigh.

"Oh, if it could only be!"

"What, Berna? Tell me what?"

"If you could only take me away from them, protect me, care for me. Oh, if you could only marry me, make me your wife. I would be the best wife in the world to you; I would work my fingers to the bone for you; I would starve and suffer for you, and walk the world barefoot for your sake. Oh, my dear, my dear, pity me!"

It seemed as if a sudden light had flashed upon my brain, stunning me, bewildering me. I thought of the princess of my dreams. I thought of Garry and of mother. Could I take her to them?

"Berna," I said sternly, "look at me."

She obeyed.

"Berna, tell me, by all you regard as pure and holy, do you love me?"

She was silent and averted her eyes.

"No, Berna," I said, "you don't; you're afraid. It's not the sort of love you've dreamed of. It's not your ideal. It would be gratitude and affection, love of a kind, but never that great dazzling light, that passion that would raise to heaven or drag to hell."

"How do I know? Perhaps that would come in time. I care a great deal for you. I think of you always. I would be a true, devoted wife—"

"Yes, I know, Berna; but you don't love me, love me; see, dear. Listen, Berna! Here's where our difference in race comes in. You would rush blindly into this. You would not consider, test and prove yourself. It's the most serious matter in life to me, something to be looked at from every side, to be weighed and balanced."

Her Tears Were Salt Upon My Lips, Yet Her Own Lips Were Cold.

As I said this, my conscience was whispering fiercely: "Oh, fool! Coward! Faltering, despicable coward! This girl throws herself on you, on your honor, chivalry, manhood, and you screen yourself behind a barrier of convention."

However, I went on.

"You might come to love me in time, but we must wait a while, little girl. Surely that is reasonable? I care for you a great, great deal, but I don't know if I love you in the great way people should love. Can't we wait a little, Berna? I'll look after you, dear; won't that do?"

She disengaged herself from me, sighing woefully.

"Yes, I suppose that'll do. Oh, I'll never forgive myself for saying that to you. I shouldn't, but I was so desperate. You don't know what it meant to me. Please forget it, won't you?"

"No, Berna, I'll never forget it, and I'll always bless you for having said it. Believe me, dear, it will all come right. I'll watch no one harms you, and love will come to both of us in good time, that love that means life and death, hate and adoration, rapture and pain, the greatest thing in the world. Oh, my dear, my dear, trust me! Let us wait a little longer, just a little longer."

"Yes, that's right, a little longer."

Her voice was faint and toneless. She disengaged herself.

"Now, good-night; they may have missed me."

Almost before I could realize it she had disappeared amid the tents, leaving me there in the gloom with my heart full of doubt, self-reproach and pain.

Oh, despicable, paltering coward!

CHAPTER V

It was spring when we set sail on the sunlit waters of Lake Bennett. Never had I felt so glad. And indeed it was a vastly merry mob that sailed with us, straining their eyes once more to the Eldorado of their dreams. Yet, under all the mirth and gayety, you could feel, tense, ruthless and dominant, the spirit of the trail. Klondike or bust! Once more the slogan rang on bearded lips; once more the gold-lust smoldered in their eyes. The old primal lust resurged.

Of all who had started out with us but a few had got this far. Of these Mervin and Hewson were far in front, victors of the trail, qualified to rank with the Men of the High North, the sourdoughs of the Yukon valley. Three days' start ahead were the Winklesteins.

I kept a keen lookout for them and every day I hoped we would overtake their scow, for constantly I thought of Berna. Her face, so wistfully tender, haunted me, and over and over in my mind I kept recalling our last meeting.

At times I blamed myself for letting her go so easily, and then again I was thankful that I had not allowed my heart to run away with my head. For I was beginning to wonder if I had not given her my heart, given it easily, willingly and without reserve. And in truth at the idea I felt a strange thrill of joy. The girl seemed to me all that was fair, lovable and sweet.

We were now skimming over Tagish lake; a dead calm, a blazing sun, a seething mist of mosquitoes. We sweltered in the heat; we strained, with blistered hands, at the oars; we cursed and toiled like a thousand others of that grotesque fleet. We entered the Fifty-mile river; we were in a giant valley; tier after tier of benchland rose to sentinel mountains of austerest grandeur.

The river was our beast of burden now, a tireless, gentle beast. Then one evening as we were sweeping down the placid river, the current suddenly quickened. The banks were sliding past at a strange speed. Swiftly we whirled around a bend, and there we were right on top of the dreadful canyon. Straight ahead was what seemed to be a solid wall of rock. The river looked to have no outlet; but as we drew nearer we saw that there was a narrow chasm in the stony face, and at this the water was rearing and charging with an angry roar.

I was in the bow. All at once I saw directly in front a scow struggling to make the shore. In her there were three people, two women and a man. I saw the man jump out with a rope and try to snub the scow to a tree. Three times he failed, running along the bank and shouting frantically. I saw one of the women jump for the shore. Then at the same instant the rope parted, and the scow, with the remaining woman, went swirling on into the canyon.

All this I saw, and so fascinated was I that I forgot our own peril. I heard a shrill scream of fear; I saw the solitary woman crouch down in the bottom of the scow, burying her face in her hands; I saw the scow rise, hover, and then plunge downward into the angry maw of the canyon.

The river hurried us on helplessly. We were in the canyon now. About midway was a huge basin, like the old crater of a volcano, sloping upward to the pine-fringed skyline. Here was a giant eddy, and here, circling round and round, was the runaway scow. The forsaken woman was still crouching on it.

"Keep clear of that scow," I heard some one shout. "Avoid the eddy."

It was almost too late. The ill-fated scow spun round and swooped down on us. Jim and the Jam-wagon gave a desperate strain at the oars. I saw the scow swirling past, just two feet from us. I looked again—then with a wild panic of horror I saw that the crouching figure was that of Berna.

I remember jumping—it must have been five feet—and I landed half in, half out of the water. I remember clinging a moment, then pulling myself aboard. I heard shouts from the others as the current swept them in to the canyon. I remember looking round and cursing because both sweeps had been lost overboard, and lastly I remember bending over Berna and shouting in her ear.

"All right, I'm with you!"

Jewelers Unable to Duplicate Goa Stone

Goa, a settlement on the West coast of Mala, has for centuries been the property of the Portuguese, says an article in London Tit-Bits. Shortly after their occupation, the Jesuits appeared and set up a monastery, and it was there that a special sort of "jewel" was made. The Jesuits made these stones, which have come to be known as Goa stones, from various solidified drugs, but we today are totally "in the dark" as to what drugs they were composed of and how they were made.

Each stone was mounted in a silver filigree case and represented fine examples of old workmanship.

When the owner of the stone was troubled with indigestion he had only to scrape off a small portion of his stone, and drink it in a glass of water, and he was quite all right in a few moments.

Goa stones today, however, are rare and are only to be found in valuable collections of antiques.

Highest Form of Power

The regeneration of a sinner is evidence of power in the highest sphere—moral nature; with the highest prerogative—to change nature; and operating to the highest result—not to create originally, which is great, but to create anew, which is greater.—William Arthur.

Let the Heart Rule

Sincerity is the very foundation stone of true friendliness. It is also a human trait that is hard to counterfeit, as the sincere friendly impulse comes from the soul of a man and not from the circulating mind. Think kindly and friendly thoughts. If you have a heart and a soul, why be ashamed of them? Bring them into the shop, the office and your daily life. The hand may be cunning, and the head may contain the brain that can conceive the most brilliant thoughts, but every good and worthy impulse comes from the heart. Strengthen your faith in men; think kindly of them, believe that they are your friends, and in the long run they will be.—Exchange.

And Don't Be Slow About It

If you want to know what's in the soup you must do a little spooning.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Sees Dire Possibility of Bird Campaigning

Picking "official" things is getting to be a nuisance, in the opinion of George Martin, editor of Farm and Fireside. The recent drive of women's clubs to select an "official" bird for each state brought out his comment.

"We are a little doubtful over the wisdom of this," he writes. "As it is the birds are rather a democratic lot. If any one bird, the meadow-lark, the peewee, the English sparrow or the turkey buzzard should be singled out for official distinction, it might easily become intolerably overbearing. Also, if the birds get onto this movement, we may face the unpleasant prospect of a political campaign for the honor, with all the broadcasting and wire-pulling that would involve. Imagine having every snipe and woodpecker pestering us for votes!

"Our hope is that nobody thinks up a scheme for the election of an official worm for each state."

Clean Teeth Aid Health

Have you ever tried 20 Mule Team Borax to sweeten the mouth and clean the teeth? Borax is a mild antiseptic—a perfect cleanser. Keep a cupful at hand to use regularly on the toothbrush.—Adv.

Dainty Foods Aid Beauty

With the slim movement now a well-established fact among the fair sex, light foods are the prevailing favorites. Meats, potatoes, pies and rich puddings have been sidetracked for salads, light vegetables, fruits, flavored gelatins, ice creams and the more delicate cakes. Brillat-Savarin, famous French gastronome, foresaw the dietary needs of the ladies. He said among other things that "succulent and dainty dishes will give the eyes a fine sparkle, the skin a lovely bloom, the flesh more firmness, thus keeping away wrinkles, beauty's worst enemies. Those who know the art of eating, other things being equal, are proportionately ten years younger than those who scorn it."

Bobby's Defense

"I've a notion to spank you for that," said Bobby's mother as she watched him crush a worm under his foot.

"Well, mother, that's the only way I could keep that bird from gittin' it. I gave the worm a chance to get away, but it wouldn't go. I told it to hide, but it wouldn't listen to nothin' I said," was Bobby's defense.

Medical Service at Sea

The Public Health service says that the great majority of the 10,000 merchant vessels registered by the Department of Commerce do not carry medical officers. Ship's officers are required, however, to know medical first-aid principles. Ships now often radio to marine hospitals for medical advice.

Carrier Pigeons on Ranch

Because of the high cost of installing telephone lines, the owner of a large ranch, in Nevada, is training carrier pigeons to deliver messages to foremen at scattered sheep camps and other places. He has 11 birds now being taught to take messages and return with replies.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

"Well, no more than I do getting around with the second-hand bus I bought."

NEW AIR MONSTERS

Germany's Graf Zeppelin is at present the world's largest airship. England will soon complete two which will exceed the Graf Zeppelin in size. But the largest aircraft ever designed are now being built for the United States Navy — two super-Zeppelins with a gas capacity of 6,500,000 cubic feet each.

The relative size of these monsters of the air may be imagined by comparison with the present Los Angeles with 2,500,000 cubic feet and Graf Zeppelin with 3,700,000 cubic feet.

The new American ships will have a maximum speed of about 85 miles an hour, with a cruising radius of between 6,000 and 8,000 miles without refuelling. Each will carry a number of airplanes which may be launched while in flight.

These two great ships promise to be the monarchs of the air for some time to come—until Uncle Sam or someone else builds a bigger one.

EARNEST YOUNG PEOPLE

In spite of all the loose talk and writing about the wild youth of the present day, recent statistics from the Bureau of Education indicate that the percentage of earnest young people is still very high.

These statistics show that one-half of the young men and one-fourth of the young women in the colleges and universities of the United States are earning their schooling, in whole or in part through working outside of school hours. In one year more than $33,000,000 was earned by the labor of students.

Among the part time jobs held by students are office work, automobile repairing, specialty selling, teaching, hotel and summer resort employment, household service, farm work and other activities.

In the face of such a showing as is being made, it can hardly be maintained that the young generation is as frivolous as its critics would have us believe.

SCOFFS AT DAILY DOZEN

To those of us who do not relish a lot of physical culture exercises before breakfast or at any other time, a recent pronouncement by Dr. Jesse F. Williams, professor of physical education at Teachers' College, New York, comes as a message of cheer.

Dr. Williams declares that early rising to the accompaniment of an alarm clock, going through wearisome sttting-up exercises and enduring a cold bath is "silly, superstitious and artificial."

Because of the mass of physical culture propaganda with which we have been deluged in recent years, we have come to believe that any sort of painful contortions which we loathe must be good for us. It is doubtful whether those who indulge in these fads are any healthier or longer lived than those who go through life naturally and painlessly.

Anyway, we hope Dr. Williams is right, and as his advice is easy to follow, we imagine that a good many will give it a very thorough trial by forgetting the daily dozen and other ceremonies prescribed by the faddists.

THRIFT AND CRIME

Encouragement of thrift as a means of reducing crime is suggested by a well-known publicist, who declares that extravagant habits in many cases are the direct cause of banditry.

Aside from the financial gains possible through economy and thrift, the habit of saving has a stabilizing effect upon one's character. The person who is laying aside something each week or each month with the idea of ultimately securing financial independence is more dependable than the one who spends his money as fast or faster than he makes it.

Many who have resorted to dishonesty in order to secure needed funds quickly are those who have been first led into extravagant living. Allowing themselves to indulge in luxuries in excess of what their earnings warrant, they more easily yield to temptation to dishonesty in its various forms.

Habits of thrift should be inculcated early and should be encouraged at every turn. Thosse who have acquired such habits are generally industrious, ambitious and honest.

STEEL FOR SAFETY

Any and all means whereby the appalling loss of life and limb by automobile accidents may be lessened deserve the earnest consideration of the motoring public. The best brains of the country are being devoted to this great problem.

Among the innovations of the last few years which tend to minimize the dangers of traffic is the all-steel automobile body, which by its great strength and rigidity has already demonstrated its worth as an aid to safety.

Edward G. Budd of the manufacturing company which bears his name announces that six million automobiles, or about one-fourth of all motor cars now in service, are equipped with all-steel bodies made by his firm; that more than 170 repair stations especially equipped to serve their owners have been established in principal cities, and that this service will be rapidly extended.

While the steel body will not prevent collisions and other accidents it will serve to protect in a greater measure the occupants from serious injury, just as the all-steel Pullman has proved its superiority over the old wooden coach.

WHITE LIES

The old question of whether a falsehood is ever justified is brought to mind by the death of Mrs. Minna Prieskel in Lodi, N. J., recently at the age of 72. A series of falsehoods had cheered her old age for more than ten years.

Mrs. Prieskel was critically ill when her son, Robert, was killed in action in France on March 26, 1918. Doctors warned that if she were told the sad news it would kill her. She was never told.

Her family caused a letter to be sent to her, supposedly from her son, telling her that he was employed in France. Each week a letter written in the United States and sent to France to be remailed to the mother, was received and read to her, telling of her boy's imagined doings abroad. In all 520 of these spurious letters were received by the waiting invalid, who until the last had hopes of seeing her son again.

Similar "white lies" have prevent mental anguish in thousands o cases the world over. Who can say with assurance that it was wrong to tell them?

COAST TO COAST BUSSES

When the first regular coasts to coast bus line between New York and San Francisco was established about a year ago—on May 1, 1928, to be exact—perhaps few expected to witness the rapid growth of this form o transcontinental travel which has taken place.

At first only one bus left each terminal daily for its long journe across the continent. Now seven are regularly scheduled for each day, and recently 140 passengers left New York for the West by the bus route in 24 hours.

The time between New York and San Francisco is five and a half days only one day longer than that of th fastest passenger trains, while th fare by motor bus is $65, about one-half of the railroad fare. Stop-over privileges en route are permitted, so that one may travel only by day if desired, sleeping in hotels at night.

However, this is not exactly an advertisement for the bus line, for frankly, if we were making the trip and had the price, we should probably hit a Pullman instead of a bus.

Archbishop Ussher's figures showed that the world was created in the year 4004 B. C. A famous British physicist says that it is three billion years older than that. What is your guess?

Judge Gemmill of Chicago declares that alimony is America's greatest curse. But the judge, you know, is a man.

If the movement to stamp out illiteracy succeeds where shall we get our future juries?

COLLEGE HEAD AT 30

When D. Robert Maynard Hutchins assumes the presidency of the University of Chicago on July 1 he will become the youngest president of a major university. He was 30 years old on January 17 last.

His selection for this high post is all the more remarkable because the university is just entering upon an extension program calling for the expenditure of many millions of dollars over a period of several years.

Dr. Hutchins was educated at Oberlin and Yale, his studies having been interrupted by the World War, in which he won the Italian War Cross for brilliant service on the Italian front. He was graduated from Yale in 1921 and has since been a member of the faculty of that institution.

It is interesting to note that as a student he was self-supporting. His rise to the presidency of a great university is perhaps unprecedented in American educational annals. His future career will be observed with unusual interest.

BOYS TO SAVE WOOD

American boys will be taught to utilize wood which is now wasted, such as second-hand boxes and crates, odd pieces of lumber and the like. The boys will be drawn from the Boy Scouts, 4-H clubs and other juvenile organizations.

This movement for wood conservation is sponsored by the Department of Commerce, which has compiled directions for making about 1,200 different useful articles for camp, home and garden use from this hitherto wasted material.

A committee of 150 leading citizens will assist the government in carrying out the plan, which will include the equipping of woodworking shops where the boys may develop their skill in the manufacture of the articles suggested.

Civic organizations will be asked to co-operate in the movement which will tend to encourage the cleaning up of unsightly accumulations and devoting the salvaged material to valuable use.

MANY ODD FEATURES AT SALINAS RODEO

The person who has the slowest horse will be one of the winners at the California Rodeo, July 17 to 21, at Salinas, according to plans being worked out by B. H. Schulte, president of the Monterey County Farm Bureau. Each farm center is to have a representative in the race. The plans are to have each representative change horses and ride the horse entered by another farm center, and the horse that crosses the line last will win the money. Of course, each contestant will desire to make the other fellow's horse cross the line first, as well as to hinder his own horse going ahead.

This race will be held on Wednesday, July 17, the opening day of the Rodeo.

There will be several other new features this year. Besides the usual contest of the champion bronc rider, bull rider and lassoer, rope thrower, and trick rider, there have been added ten running races each day. The California Cattlemen's Association are desiring to improve the cow-horses of California, and are offering a beautiful trophy in that event. The cattlemen are holding a live stock show in conjunction with the Rodeo that is attracting entries from the leading stock ranches of the state.

SWART NAMED HEAD OF STATE PROSECUTORS

Franklin Swart, district attorney of San Mateo county, is now president of the California District Attorneys Association, having been elected last Saturday at the nineteenth annual convention of the association, at Eureka. Jess Lowell, of Inyo county, was named vice-president; Orrin J. Lowell, of Placer county, was re-elected secretary. Lake Arrowhead was selected for the 1930 convention. The delegates were addressed by Orrin K. McMurray, dean of the University of California law school, speaking on English criminal procedure.

SENATORS IMMUNE

In a recent Washington news letter Wm. L. Daley of the National Editorial Association comments on the violence with which presidential nominees for appointive office are frequently attacked by Senators who oppose their confirmation, and says: "Senators are immune from civil damage for their comments in the Senate regardless of how far it approaches blackguardism."

In other words, a Senator may make the most reckless and untruthful statements concerning anyone without being held to account, no matter how much these utterances may unjustly reflect upon and injure the persons so attacked.

Scarcely a day passes while Congress is in session that some member does not indulge in unrestrained and unwarranted attacks on citizens against whom he holds enmity. These remarks are broadcast to the country through the Congressional Record and by sensational newspapers, and the victims are powerless to protect themselves.

While members of Congress should have reasonable latitude in criticizing persons or policies which they oppose, the wholesale immunity which legislators enjoy works a grave injustice to many honorable citizens. And, unfortunately, it appears that some Senators who make a specialty of reckless talk find no difficulty in securing re-election.

John Quincy Brown, aged 71, Sacramento pioneer and former mayor of that city, died Monday at the Sutter hospital from an illness lasting for more than a year and a half. Brown, a University of California graduate, led the campaign which led to the building of the state highway across Yolo basin between Sacramento and Davis, in 1914.

SCHOOL BILL HELD INJUSTICE TO BOYS

Governor Young "listened to bad advice" when the signed the so-called 24-hour school bill, James B. Davidson, Marin county superintendent of public instruction, declared in a statement issued at San Rafael last Saturday.

"It is another of those measures," said Davidson, "designed to brand young America in advance as criminals. It should be put to a referendum and immediately killed. It is vicious legislation that strikes directly at the vitals of the home.

"Any boy who is ambitious naturally is disposed to boyish pranks. Any spirited child is liable to steal a watermelon, invade some neighbor's orchard or throw a baseball through somebody's window. Yet for any one of these things he can be started on a criminal career by being sent to a school that is actually a jail, without his parents or school teachers having anything to say about it.

"In short, the bill makes it possible for some nervous old woman to make a criminal of a good boy.

"If I were not engaged for vacation work, I would start out tomorrow on a campaign to have this vicious measure killed."

"NOAH'S ARK MAKES HIT AT THE EMBASSY THEATRE

Dolores Costello has never been so appealingly lovely as in her dual starring role in "Noah's Ark," Warner Brothers' Vitaphone super-special now at the Embassy Theatre, San Francisco. Miss Costello plays the part of a dancing girl who finds herself in the midst of the World war, bereft of her Ameican lover. Sentenced to be shot as a spy by the machinations of a man she had repulsed, she is saved by a bursting shell which hurls her and the lover, who has tried to save her, into the cellar of a ruined Fench chateau—where, as the chaplain compares the modern flood of blood with the ancient flood—all are wafted back fifty centuries, and she plays the part of a persecuted maiden in the days of Noah.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Powell, of San Francisco, and Mrs. Elizabeth O'Brien, of Gambetta street, returned home last week after a ten day vacation spent at Yosemite Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Frazier, of 585 Hanover street, are receiving the congratulations of their many friends upon the birth of a baby son, born at their home Monday, June 17. The baby has been named Carl.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Marking the completion of original construction throughout the length of the Redwood Highway, the Hiouchi (Blue Waters) Bridge over the Smith River was dedicated and thrown open to travel June 22. The importance of the completion of this last link was emphasized by the presence at the ceremonies of the governors of California and Oregon and highway officials of the three Pacific Coast states. The bridge derives its name "Hiouchi" from the Indian term meaning "blue waters," applied to the Smith River because of the deep blue coloring of its water. The bridge is a through cantilever steel truss structure with a total length of 608 feet. Its total cost, including approaches, was $170,479.50.

Actual contruction has been started by the George H. Mauer Company of Piedmont on the new $40,000 Crockett station of the Southern Pacific Company.

Drilling near Sweitzer's Grove at Bakersfield proved successful for the Western Gulf Petroleum Company when a gusher, estimated at 1500 barrels daily, came in without warning.

Traces of oil have been coming from a 160-foot well on the William Hay dairy ranch near Watsonville. Samples will be taken of the sand deposits and sent to the Unversity of California for analysis. No oil wells have been drilled in the vicinity.

The salary of a member of the Legislature or any other state officer whose compensation is fixed by the constitution may not be attached. Attorney General U. S. Webb makes that assertion in an opinion rendered Ray L. Riley, state controller.

California Water Service Corporation has purchased seventy acres near Concord from Frank W. Moore for an indicated consideration of $35,000, according to a deed filed with the County Recorder. The corporation is acquiring property for possible development of wells to augment its present supply should necessity arise.

Madera Supervisors rejected the offer of the United States Department of Agriculture for the improvement of the eighteen miles of highway in the North Fork forest from North Fork to Bufford. The Government's proposal was to improve this road and maintain it for two years, providing the county would maintain it when it was turned back.

Fifty young inmates of the Bakersfield Children's Shelter will scatter to the far corners of the West, because the State of California, represented by the State Welfare Department, has decreed that the shelter shall be discontinued. It constitutes a fire hazard and is incapable of adequately caring for the needs of the children, according to an investigation conducted recently.

Engineering and surveying crews of the War Department will pass the entire summer in Humboldt county, according to Major Elihu H. Ropes, army engineer for the First district, who visited Eureka recently. Among the projects listed are Mad river basin survey, Eel river survey, Humboldt bay dredging, geodetic survey along coast, repair work on Humboldt jetties. Aerial surveys also may be made later in the year.

Building permits issued in Martinez during the past month totaled $63,885, according to Building Inspector John Briones. The largest permit granted was an eight unit bungalow court which will be erected at a cost of $18,000. Included in the permits was one for a four-unit bungalow court, eight for the construction of new homes, two for the Southern Pacific Company for the construction of bunk houses and a cook house and six for alterations to homes and buildings totaling $5075.

Carrying $150,000 from the state's general fund for purpose of effecting settlements of contracts between Durham and Delhi land settlers and the state, a measure sponsored by Senator Ray Jones of Marysville had the governor's approval. It provides for alteration of contracts or such other action as the director of agriculture with the permission of the state land settlement board may take to get the state out of the land colonization business.

Frank J. Mellor, Pittsburg building inspector, recently made public the building permit totals for May as $136,440. This figure is more than $100,000 short of the previous month when a new record for building activity was established. Thirty-eight permits were issued, thirty-three of them calling for residences, two for business buildings and three for repair jobs. The total of building permit valuations for the first five months of the year is $735,851, a new record, according to Mellor.

Siskiyou county's hopes for a junior college were blasted when representatives of the State Department of Education, making a survey for such an institution there informed county officials that no school may be established in a county with an assessed valuation of less than $25,000,000. Siskiyou county's present assessed valuation is slightly in excess of $23,000,000. At the rate of increase during the past five years it is estimated that it will be at least three years before this minimum wealth ratio will have been reached.

JOHNSON'S GREAT PITCHING STUNT

Three Victories Over Highlanders Stand Out.

His three shutout victories on successive days against the New York Highlanders in 1908 stand out as one of the greatest pitching feats of Walter Johnson's 20 years on the mound for Washington.

Johnson, whose twentieth anniversary in the big leagues will be observed on August 2, readily admits that those 27 scoreless innings gave him one of the biggest thrills in his colorful career.

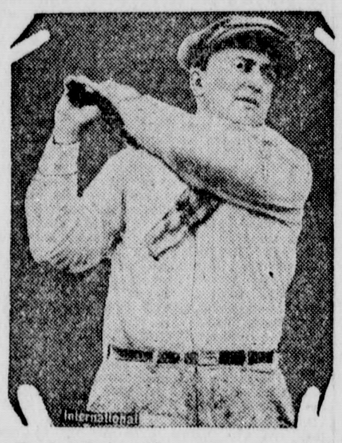
Just a rookie was Johnson then, strong as an ox and possessed of blinding speed, and he eagerly jumped at the chance to work so often against New York when Manager Cantillon asked him to do so because of injuries to a trio of Washington pitchers.

Johnson faced Chesbro in the first game and triumphed, 3-0. He won the next day by a 6-0 score and, after resting Sunday because no games were played on Sunday then, he worked in the first game of Monday's double-header and again registered a shutout win.

This feat might have been four straight scoreless victories had not Johnson been injured by a pitched ball. He was ready to start the fourth successive game of the series, but Manager Cantillon refused to let him go in because of his injury.

"That," says Johnson, "is the only time in my career I was ever called upon to pitch so many games during one series, and I doubt very much if I could do the same stunt again. Father Time doesn't stand for such tricks, you know."

Ty Turns to Golf



Ty Cobb, for 20 years a star of the diamond, has turned to golf. This is one of the first pictures made of him on the golf course at the Forrest Hills club near Augusta. During his diamond career Cobb said he'd never play golf because he thought the game would spoil his batting eye. Now he's retired from the ball field and golf pros say his eye is just as keen on the fairway. He's never missed the elusive pill yet.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

With small children in the home their food must be carefully selected and served. When they sit at the same table with the grownups, it is best to serve the kind of food all may eat and enjoy. For breakfast the citrus fruits, baked apples, prunes, figs or cooked pears, when the fresh are not obtainable. From this list the adult may find one that suits his taste. With a good cooked cereal, served with a little honey or raw sugar, buttered toast and a glass of warm milk for the child, coffee for the adult.

For dinner—stewed chicken or boiled fish, broiled steak, roast lamb, lamb chops, mashed or baked potatoes, noodles or spaghetti with the chicken, spinach, cabbage shredded and served with the cream and a bit of lemon juice and sugar as dressing, stewed tomatoes, buttered parsnips, carrots or creamed onions. For dessert, fresh fruit, tapioca or prune whip, floating island, junket or various custards or rice pudding.

For supper—vegetable soup, or any cream soup containing the cooked vegetable like onion, asparagus, spinach. Scrambled or codled eggs, entire wheat bread, any simple sponge cake or cooky, apple sauce, berries, fresh peaches, canned pears, and warm milk.

Rice Custard.—Beat two eggs thoroughly, add one pint of milk, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and one-half cupful of sugar; stir in one and one-half cupfuls of cooked rice and flavor with nutmeg or cinnamon. Bake twenty to thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with thin cream for the children or a hard sauce for the grownups.

Floating Island.—Put a quart of milk into the top of a double boiler. Beat the whites of three eggs until dry; put a spoonful over the top until the milk is covered. Cover and cook until the egg is set. Remove the egg white with a skimmer. When all are cooked place in a glass dish. Beat the yolks of three eggs, add one-half cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful each of salt and vanilla and add to the boiling milk. Cook until the egg is cooked and pour around the egg white in the dish. Chill and serve with a simple cooky for dessert.

Take a pint of hash made of a cupful each of meat and mashed potato, well seasoned, doubling the amount if needed. Spread over the center of a well greased hot plank. Make small depressions with a tablespoon and fill with halved hard-cooked eggs, stuffed and covered with buttered crumbs. Bake with halved or sliced tomatoes around the edge, covered with a savory dressing.

Various Good Things.

A simple rice dessert which is both wholesome and easy to prepare is:

Baked Rice Custard.—Take a quart of milk, a half cupful of rice, one-half cupful of sugar, a little salt and a half cupful of raisins. Mix all well, dust with cinnamon or nutmeg and place in the oven to bake for an hour and a half.

Oatmeal Ginger Cookies.—Heat one-half cupful of molasses, add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half cupful of brown sugar and two tablespoonfuls of milk. Sift one cupful of pastry flour, one cupful of oatmeal, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of soda and one teaspoonful of ginger and add to the first mixture. Cool and roll on a floured board, cut into cookies and bake on a baking sheet fifteen minutes in a moderate oven. Many prefer to brown the oatmeal well and grind it through the meat grinder before adding.

Fruit Cup.—Take one cupful each of white grapes, orange sections and diced pineapple. Remove the skins and seeds from the grapes and the membrane from the orange sections. Mix the fruit, one-half cupful of orange juice and the same of pineapple juice, sugar to taste and a few grains of salt. Pack in a freezer until the juice begins to freeze. Serve in tall glass garnished with maraschino cherries.

Walnut Prune Whip.—Take one cupful of prune pulp (cooked prunes, seeded and put through a sieve), beat three egg whites until stiff, add three tablespoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla and carefully fold in the prune pulp and one-half cupful of chopped walnut meats. Set in a pan of hot water and bake until firm in the center. Serve with whipped cream. A cold custard may be served with it if desired. Coconut instead of walnuts may be used.

To save spattering the cook book when in use cover with a glass pie plate, or keep a piece of window glass for the purpose.

FRIENDLY FLOWERS

For many, many years, several hundred years at any rate, balsam flowers have grown in gardens. But they belong to the great family of lady's-slippers.

Family of Lady's-Slippers.

Lady's-slippers, as you know, are of different colors. Sometimes they are white, sometimes yellow or red or pink.

The flowers came from India a long time ago and the lady's-slippers are the best known of all the cultivated balsam flowers.

Of course you know there are times when a wild flower is cultivated.

It is looked after in the same way, in a garden, as a regular cultivated flower.

It is made to grow more wonderful and larger and more perfect.

Some people love the wild flowers the best.

They become so strong and tall and beautiful, or small and dainty and lovely without any help at all.

To be sure Mr. Sun and the King of the Clouds help them.

But they don't have the fuss that the garden flowers have. They look after themselves and are very plucky, I think.

But to return to the balsam flowers. The members of this family named the Sultan's Balsam, have strange ways.

They are of a bright scarlet color which isn't strange at all. In fact they're very beautiful. But the strange thing about them is that they love a fire.

They don't come out when they are thrown in the fire. Oh, no, they don't do that.

But they love the fireside. They would rather be indoors in a nice room where a fire was burning cheerily than they would to be out of doors.

So they like the weather to be cool enough for a fire, but not too cool.

In fact they like the coziness of a fireplace, I believe.

You know how cheerful and cozy and bright and friendly a fireplace always is?

Well, I believe the balsam flowers love that coziness and they show they love it by thriving better in a room where there is an open fire than they will with Mr. Sun's rays shining down upon them.

Cozy Balsam Flowers.

And perhaps they can read stories in the fireplace. Perhaps they can see fairy tales being acted in the blue and red and orange flames.

Anyway, they love the open fires, and so I think we ought to call them the cozy balsam flowers.

But you know one of the reasons why the wild flowers love being the wild flowers is because they belong to everyone.

They grow wild, as you know, in the woods and the fields, along brooks and by country roads.

They belong to everyone—and not to any special garden.

They like to be picked if people will pick them carefully and not pull them up by the roots.

They aren't sheltered, nor are weeds kept away from them, for very often they are really no more than you would call weeds.

But they want people to pick them carefully and not to pick more than they really want for an attractive bunch.

That is what they want more than anything—so remember that when you pick wild flowers, for wild flowers are so friendly—that it is nice to do the one thing they wish.

Squaring Up on Presents

Dorothy and Jean are chums, both eight years old on the same day, so they decided to give each other a birthday present.

Dorothy paid 35 cents for her present to give Jean and when she received Jean's present she recognized it as costing only 20 cents. She was disappointed and finally said to Jean, "I paid 35 cents for your present and you only paid 20 cents for mine."

Jean, thinking hard for a minute, dug her hand in her pocket and said: "Well, here's a nickel, and I'll owe you a dime."

Her Hands Were Sticky

Betty was invited to a birthday party. After the party mother came to take Betty home. When they were walking along she took her hand as they neared a street crossing.

"Good gracious, Betty!" exclaimed her mother, "How sticky your hands are!"

"So would yours be," said Betty, "if you had an apple taffy and a chocolate Easter egg in your pocket."

On the Funny Side

OUGHT TO GET ALONG!

Sambo had found a job for the week on a railroad section gang, and was taking leave of his family when his wife came to the door and shouted: "Come back heah, Sam. You hasn't cut a stick of wood fo' de stove—and you'll be gone a week!"

The negro turned and looked very much aggrieved. "Honey," he said in a tone of injured innocence, "what's de matah? You-all talks as though Ah was takin' de ax with me."

Mending Done at Doctor's

White—Where were you coming from when I met you yesterday?

Brown—From the doctor's. I had some mending done.

White—What did the doctor mend for you?

Brown—A couple of socks my wife gave me.

ALWAYS DOWN

Customer—Well, how's business in feathers now? Picking up, I guess.

Dealer—No, my friend, it is always down.

Habituation

The World has sung the same old song,
On "Culture" still intent.
We say that something must be wrong,
Because it's different.

Excusable

He was on trial for having shot a saxophone player and in defence stated that he thought it was a cat.

"But you mustn't shoot anything," said the magistrate firmly. "Not even a cat."

"Please, your worship, I thought this one was very, very ill."

Fitting

Mrs. P.—All the closets are full. There's no room for my clothes anywhere.

Mr. P.—There's plenty available space on you, darling!

MASHED EVEN POTATOES

Hubby—The cook's rather pretty, but flirtatious, I think.

Wife (alarmed)—Why do you think so?

Hubby—She mashes even the turnips and potatoes, you see.

Grand Operatics

On Opera we're still intent,
While Statesmen stir the Nation
A large amount of Sentiment
Is just Vociferation.

Pull Together, Hereafter

"So the two dentists out your way have combined."

"Yes, they finally decided to pull together."

He Had Heard of It

"Hello, whiskers; where are you going with that lantern?"

"What place is this?"

"New York."

"Well," said Diogenes, sorrowfully, "I guess it won't do any good to look here."

Motor Cars We Don't See

"What a lot of motor cars one sees nowadays!" remarked the tall man.

"Yes, thank heaven!" returned his friend. "It's the ones we don't see that send us to the hospital."

She Guffawed Then

Sam—I never see you with Miss Gidlings any more.

Lou—No; I couldn't stand her vulgar laughing.

Sam—So! I haven't noticed it.

Lou—No, you weren't around when I proposed to her.

Looks—Not Comfort

Shoe Clerk—How do the shoes fit you, Mrs. Stiles?

Mrs. Stiles—They fit me beautifully, but hurt me dreadfully when I try to walk in them.

AFTER OPERATIONS

"I was three times under an operation and I was very weak and nervous and could not eat. I suffered for ten years. I learned about Lydia E. RAILROAD WILL DISPATCH ALL TRAINS BY TELEPHONE

After this year the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad will discard all wire communication except that supplied by telephone or automatic printer. The printer will be used for general message service between divisional points.

The New Haven is the first railroad in the nation to make exxclusive use of the telephone for the dispatching of trains and to eliminate the telegraph and other forms of communication having to do with the direction and routing of trains. During the past two years train dispatching exclusively by telephone has been in operation on the New Haven Railroad and has been found to be more efficient and much more flexible than the telegraph system for the dispatching of trains. In many cases it has also made possible the lengthening and consolidating of dispatching districts, thereby effecting important economies as well as added efficiency in the operation of the road.

THE SKIPPER COMES ASHORE

By James D. McCLURE.
Released by National Automoble Club.

CHAPTER I—PART 10

Some years ago, possibly thirty five or more, I sailed into Humbolt Bay on the Clipper Ship "Northern Light," and anchored just opposit the city of Eureka, near Gunther' Island, a long, irregular shape stretch of low-lying marsh land—a that time the site of a few humbl dwellings, now the location of severa large saw mills. In those days th arrival of a ship was quite an even and we were usually visited by miscellaneous group of citizens, riff raft and elite, young and old.

It so happened that on this par ticular occasion the weather was hard ly conducive to experiencing the neces sary trip in a small boat, from th landing to our ship. We were a anchor awaiting the abatement of storm which made crossing the ba an impossibility. Our lone visito was an old codger who had dwelt i that vicinity for sixty-two years an who, in fair weather and foul, man aged to navigate his dingy to the sid of any visiting ship in hopes tha his powers of story telling migh soften the skipper's heart to th point where he would invite his visito to "splice the main brace" and per haps bestow upon him a bottle of run and a small quantity of tobacco.

It was from the lips of this old timer that I heard the tale of th massacre of Gunther's Island—a event which for sheer brutality an horror has no equal in the history o civilization. To date no trace or clu of the perpetrators has been uncov ered, and the deed remains on th records of that region as one of thos strange and horrible occurrences whic appear in the histories of all countrie —tainting, with their utter abandon of decency, the cleanest and unsullie of civilized eras.

This story was recalled to my min through reading a clipping in a loca paper, giving an account of th funeral services for Jerry James, th lone surviving Indian of that massacre of February 25, 1860. Various or ganizations and individuals turned ou to do homage and pay tribute to th memory of this Indian who, throug the seventy-one years of his life, ha shown genuine friendship for the white race—the race responsible for th frenzied killing of more than tw hundred of his own people.

In the early days Gunther's Island was the dwelling place of a tribe of Indians, comparatively inoffensive living in peace with the white man's settlements, and earning their ex istence by hunting, fishing, and the raising of such crops as were necessary for their livelihood. In common with all savages, these Indians were superstitious believers in the unfathomable powers of their gods of war and of peace, of famine and of plenty. Once each year they, and other friendly tribes from the valleys of the Eel and Mad rivers, would congregate on the island to perform their ritualistic rites in solemn worship of the Great Spirit. During the month of February, in the year 1860, more than two hundred men, women and children had assembled at the Rancheria on the island, there to spend days and nights in on orgy of savage ceremonies—deeply significant in their own estimation, and entirely free from offense towards their white neighbors.

But now to go back a few months prior to that assembly. A league of white men had been formed; a league whose members had sworn to keep within their breasts the secrets of the organization, and so well was that solemn vow observed that no suffering conscience or death-bed confession ever revealed the names of those responsible for the wholesale slaughter of those unarmed and unsuspecting savages. Meeting in out-of-way places, in lonely farm houses or isolated dwellings near the sea, no careless word revealed their identity or object. Whisperings were rampant, bits of rumor flew here and there, portentious of eventful happenings, but all cloaked in a robe of mystery and secrecy that veiled the true status of their foundation.

"LET US BE GAY" COMING TO THE CURRAN THEATRE

Lovers of legitimate entertainment will anticipate with pleasure the event of John Golden's latest production, "Let Us Be Gay," starring Edna Hibbard, which will open at the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, for a two week engagement, Monday, July 1. Rachel Crothers, author of "Let Us Be Gay," has left a long trail of laughter through the past decade with her "Old Lady 31," "A Man's World," "Nice People," "A Little Journey," "39 East," and "Expressing Willie." The new comedy uncompromisingly answers the He and She question.

John Golden has long been identified with the best in plays. His "Turn to the Right," "Lightning," "Three Wise Fools," "The First Year" and "Seventh Heaven" have set a standard which, it is said, is measured up to the Crother's comedy. In the cast supporting Miss Hibbard are Niles Welsh, Grace Hampton, Effie Arton, George North, Allen Daily, Elaine Baker, Stapleton Kent, Harry Stafford, George Marshall, William Derrick and Jennette Miller.

Miss Hibbard is perhaps best known for her splendid work in "Ladies of the Evening," and "Gentlemen Prefer Blodes." Last season she scored an emphatic success in a different type play, the melodrama "Tenth Avenue," at the Eltinge Theatre, New York.

Helen Hayes, in "Coquette," ends her run at the Curran on Saturday night, June 29.

VOLUME II FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1929 NUMBER 48

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Not So Good!

Jack: "Man is wonderful. He has learned to fly like a bird."

"Yes, but he hasn't learned to sit on a barbed wire fence."

Mr. Callahan: "Did you protest against showing the movie that represents the Irish as disorderly?"

Mr. Murphy: "Did we? We wrecked the place!"

When you think of Building, think of H. H.

He (teaching her to drive): "In case of emergency, the first thing you want to do is to put on the brake."

She: "I thought it came with the car."

DURING THE WEEK

A. J. Dalton is erecting a home on Hillcrest Drive.

It is rumored that large numbers of Scotchmen are migrating to Ireland. They have just heard that Ireland is free.

You can't satisfy some parents. Dad told daughter to run the car into the garage, and then got sore when she did.

Coal Salesman: "I'm burning with love for you."

Stenographer: "Oh, don't make a fuel of yourself."

Every dollar kept in circulation in this community helps to increase property values.

Wife (to returning husband at seaside resort): "Oh, darling, I am so glad you've come. We heard some idiot had fallen over the cliff and I thought sure it was you."

Gosh, how money goes! Just seems to slip away, doesn't it? Nothing to show for it—just gone, that's all. Why not put that money in a home? You can do it just as easily as spending it.

Olsen: "Have you noticed that successful men are usually bald?"

Olson: "Certainly, they come out on top."
